Lions Rose Bowl Parade Float 2002 Theme: "Helping People"

The Lions Rose Parade Float is one of the best and most cost-effective Public Relations tools there is. This opportunity to have Lions Clubs International presented on national television is one of the best and most inexpensive public relations endeavors ever used by Lions. More than a billion viewers witnessed the parade last year.

The event was truly a multiple district-wide effort, with Lions Clubs International dignitaries participating. Many Lions and Leos from all over California and Nevada volunteered to help with the decoration of the Rose Parade float and, in fact, assisted with many other floats in the parade.

The 2002 Rose Parade theme is "Good Times," and the Lions float will feature a giant St. Bernard ready for a rescue in a winter ski scene.

The television announcers will include a background of Lions Clubs International and a brief rundown of Lions' service activities.

Lions throughout the world are invited to participate by contacting the Lions Rose Float committee, or by visiting the Web site at www.lionsfloat.org.
